Kermit Roosevelt, Vincent Astor Put President in Embarrassing Position

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt and his New Deal Shipping Board Commissioners have been put in an embarrassing position by some of his best friends.

The friends are Kermit Roosevelt, the President's cousin, and Vincent Astor, on whose yacht the President likes to go fishing. Both are directors of the International Mercantile Marine, which has just signed an agreement with the Munson Steamship Line taking over its Pan-American Line to South America.

The story is somewhat involved and dates back to trouble between the Shipping Board and the Munson Line. The latter purchased four government vessels for its Pan-American route, still owes the government $2,250,000 and is $800,000 in arrears in paying installments.

On the Griddle

This delinquency is despite the fact that the Pan-American Line gets $1,250,000 annually from the Government on a mail contract.

Because of this delinquency, the Shipping Board has insisted that the Munson Line reorganize, cut down its capital structure, reduce too-hevy salaries. Conversations to this end have taken place since Christmas.

Last week, however, Kermit Roosevelt suddenly appeared in Washington with an agreement secretly negotiated between the International Merchantile Marine and the Munson Line. It provided for the purchase of Munson's Pan-American Line for $500,000, provided the I. M. M. got the government's $1,250,000 mail contract.

This latter is what embarrasses the New Deal Shipping Board.

Mail contracts are supposed to be awarded by public bids. Several other firms would like to bid on this contract. It is the second best awarded by the government. The Pan-American Line has been making a profit of $250,000 on it.

Also the International Mercantile Marine already owes several millions to the government. Furthermore some of its vessels operate under the Union Jack.

So despite the visit of Kermit Roosevelt, the Shipping Board has opposed the deal.

Crooner

"Well, how did you like it?" asked a colleague of Mrs. Florence Kahn, San Francisco's witty Congresswoman, following Roosevelt's applause-inspiring message to Congress.

"Very well, indeed," was the reply. "But I had a feeling that almost any moment he would burst out singing, 'Come along little doggies, come along — to the last roundup.' "

Friends of organized labor in Congress are arranging to put the National Labor Board on the griddle. The tentative plan is to hail the Board before the House Labor Committee and subject it to a critical cross examination.

Head of the committee is Massachusetts' Representative Bill Connery, one-time vaudeville hoofer and devoted laborite. Union organization in all parts of the country have flooded Connery with complaints against the Board, charging it with endless procrastination and indecision in dealing with defiant employers.

As a result of these protests, Connery has a long list of specific instances where labor charges it suffered losses at the hand of a government agency established to protect its interests. He plans to demand a detailed explanation from the Board on each case, and to do so at public hearings under a floodlight of publicity.

Too Late

A group of students stormed the White House recently to protest against compulsory military training in American schools and colleges. They were particularly vehement against the R. O. T. C.

Through the lobby of the Executive Offices they went finally and were ushered into the glum presence of little Louey Howe, confidential secretary to Roosevelt and a past master in dealing with deligations. Louey looked out through his cadaverous eyes, list-

COLUMBUS, Jan. 11.—Immediate suspension of seven students who reiterated their refusal to take a required course in military training at Ohio State university was ordered here today by Dr. George Rightmire, president of the university.

The suspension orders were accompanied with the statement that the students would be automatically reinstated without prejudice "whenever they are willing to comply with the university rule."

The action of President Rightmire climaxed more than a week's furious controversy over the issue of compulsory military training at the university, during which numerous resolutions on the pro and con side of the question were submitted to university officials.

Final action on the issue, which has been a subject of dispute for more than 60 years, was left entirely in the hands of Dr. Rightmire early this week by the university board of trustees.

Myers Names Eligibles For Liquor Glass Sales

In only six of Ohio's 88 counties may liquor be sold by the glass in every municipality and township without the necessity of a local option election, Secretary of State George S. Myers has advised the state liquor board.

These counties are Cuyahoga, Hamilton, Lucas, Summit, Ottawa and Erie. Outside of these counties liquor may be sold by the glass as soon as permits are issued, in 418 municipalities and in 502 townships.

There were 327 municipalities and 784 townships in which no liquor may be sold by the glass until at a local option election the majority of the voters register their sentiment against it.

The basis on which sale by the glass is determined is the way a municipality or township voted on the repeal of the state prohibition law at the Nov. 7 election. It is prohibited where the vote was against repeal.

In Pickaway-co sale may be made by the glass in the following places without local option: Circleville, Ashville, Commercial Point, Darbyville, South Bloomfield, Tarlton and Williamsport; Circleville, Deercreek, Harrison, Jackson, Madison, Scioto and Wayne townships. New Holland is the only dry village while eight of the townships voted against repeal.

A battery of statisticians has been busy preparing data for the liquor board since the new law went into effect on Dec. 23. Glass sale permits will be issued beginning Jan. 19, or 15 days after the filing of the first applications.

Japanese Warn Chinese To Remain Neutral.

TOKYO, Jan. 11.—(INS.)—Startling details of Soviet military preparations along the Manchurian border were officially published today by the Japanese army as it began a nationwide campaign to warn the public of the menace of war with the U. S. S. R.

In support of its allegations, the imperial army started distribution of a map throughout the island empire. In color, it vividly illustrates the Soviet army and naval positions in Oriental Russia.

The detailed map shows the distribution of 10 Soviet infantry divisions, totaling 150,000 men, and two complete divisions of cavalry. It reveals the airports where 400 Soviet military airplanes are quartered, including 60 heavy bombers.

ARMORED TANKS READY

Three hundred armored tanks are included in the motorized portion of the Soviet Siberian army, according to the map.

The army figures give 15,000 as the number of G. P. U. (Soviet Secret Service) men operating on the Manchurian and inner Mongolian border, on the look-out for spies.

Ten to 15 submarines are being constructed for use at Vladivostok and large airports are located

SHERIFF - ENGINEER GARAGE IS PLANNED

Plans Being Drawn For Steam-Heated Building In Rear of Court House.

Construction of a steam-heated garage for use of the sheriff's and county engineer's automobiles is apparently in the near future. Plans and specifications for the work are now being drawn.

The garage would be erected cast of the power house in the rear of the courthouse and would accomodate 10 cars, according to present plans. The cost of construction has not yet been estimated.

A concrete driveway will be constructed east of the county jail, between the courthouse and the jail. With this done the matter of taking prisoners from automobiles into the jail would be an easy matter. Under present conditions it is necessary to move them from the rear of the jail, around the building and into the jail.

Construction of a garage was urged in a report of the January grand jury meeting two weeks ago.

Sheriff Radcliff discussed the matter with the county commissioners this week and they looked favorably upon the project and decided to include room for the engineer's cars. A large amount of garage-space rent will be saved by the county.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 11.— A request for a $1,000,000 PWA loan to build a Memorial hall and sports center in suburban Lakewood was in the hands of Washington officials today.

The project would include a recreational and an indoor skating rink in order to be self-liquidating.

PICKAWAY TO GET $20,736

First Distribution of Tag Money To Be Made This Week, Daily Says.

Pickaway-co's share of the initial distribution of $6,076,809 to counties and municipalities from fees collected for 1934 automobile license tags will be $20,736, it was announced Thursday by the bureau of motor vehicles.

A check for that amount has not yet been received at the county auditor's office where distribution is expected to be made.

Glen M. Daily, registrar of the bureau, said the counties will receive $3,632,559 of the total amount, while $1,925,250 is being distributed to the districts of registration, including municipalities, respresenting 25 per cent of the total motor vehicle fees collected in these districts.

Cuyahoga was the only county to receive more than a million dollars, its share being $1,029,960.

Other counties receiving large shares include Hamilton, $547,992; Lucas, $325,944; Summit, $307,440; Stark, $171,432, and Mahoning, $168,264.

Distribution to the larger cities included Cleveland, $249,250; Cincinnati, $145,750; Akron, $83,750, and Canton, $28,750.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 11.—While Ohio motorists who drove without 1934 license tags are liable to arrest, the state highway department will permit residents of nearby states to use their 1933 tags in Ohio as late as March 1, it was learned today.

Glen M. Daily, registrar of motor vehicles, said Ohio would follow its reciprocity policy of recognizing every legal times extension authorized by other states. This is the first time in nine years the state has granted its own motorists NO extension.

Michigan tags for 1933 will be acceptable until March 1, Illinois and Kentucky until February 1, and West Virginia until January 16. Indiana has granted an extension but the date has not been ascertained officially.

Family Charges Intruder Killed Young Woman

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop came to trial for murder this morning with the shouts of a blood-thirsty crowd ringing in her ears.

The 62-year-old woman physician who, the state charges, killed her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop on an operating table in the basement of her home, was such a drawing-card at the Cook-co criminal court building that several thousand men and women, denied admission, howled their disappointment through the corridors.

FAMILY TALKS

CHICAGO, Jan. 11.—The Wynekoop family broke its silence and revealed its theory of the killing for which the state asks the mother's life.

Walter Wynekoop, elder brother of Earle, for whose happiness the woman physician is said to have committed the crime, and Dr. Cathrine Wynekoop, his only sister, said the family is unanimous that an intruder accidentally shot Rheta as she stood unclad beneath a sun ray lamp in the operating room in the basement.

The doctor herself believed. But she could not tell [illegible] she had had time to hear [illegible] youngest son, who had been "babied" by his mother; that he had no connection with the crime.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 11—Hopes of Ohio State university's basketball team for a victory over Northwestern Saturday in the Buckeye's first Western conference game of the season at home were brightened considerably here today when it was learned that the two ailing Ohio players probably will be able to see action.

Colburn was in uniform yesterday, but took part in only the lightest type of drill. Whitlinger was excused from practice yesterday, but both are expected to be in uniform today and ready for action Saturday night.

In drills this week, Padlow and Wilson have been at forwards, Rosequist at center, and Beitner and Capt. Conrad at guards.

After the game Saturday with Northwestern, with whom they shared the championship last season, the Buckeyes will play hosts next Monday to Indiana in a return game.

What can be used to extend chicken salad to give it bulk and to reduce the cost?

Veal is used very commonly to extend chicken salad courses, but in using it, you must remember that, though the meat is similar to chicken, too much of it should not be used if you do not want the ruse discovered. There are quite a few other things that can be used to make the salad serve a greater number of people for the quantity of chicken used.

Vegetables such as diced celery, cubed potatoes, peas, beans, parsnips, asparagus, cauliflower, or cucumber are used very successfully. Fruits such as apples, grapes, pears, or bananas can be used and meats such as ham or bacon are good, also hard cooked eggs, cottage cheese, cubes of meat jelly and some kinds of pickles in small quantity can be used to extend the salad very deliciously.

A Well Planned Menu for Dinner at Home

A dinner that is well balanced is not always tasty, but this Ham Loaf suggestion makes a juicy loaf and does not have that salty flavor.

Baked Ham Loaf — Succotash
Mashed Potatoes in Shells
Lettuce Salad — Hot Rolls
Cherry Tarts

Baked Ham Loaf Requires:

1 lb. fresh ham, ground
½ lb. smoked ham, ground
½ C. milk
2 eggs, beaten
1 C. soft bread crumbs
2 Tbsp. chili sauce
1 tsp. bottled condiment sauce
½ tsp. grated lemon rind
¼ tsp. salt
1 C. canned tomato juice
¼ tsp. pepper
1 Tbsp. flour
1½ Tbsp. cold water
1 tsp. minced onion

Combine the fresh and smoked ham, and add the milk, eggs, crumbs, chili sauce, lemon rind, salt and pepper. Mix well and place in a greased loaf pan. Bake for 1 hour in a moderate oven—375 degrees. After 30 minutes baking pour the tomato juice over the loaf and finish baking. Remove the loaf from the oven and pour the liquid from the loaf into a small saucepan. Bring to a boil and thicken with flour which has been stirred to a smooth paste with the water. Season with the condiment sauce and onion, and serve with the loaf. This is delicious served cold. This quantity makes six portions. The recipe may be cut in half to serve two or three persons.

LOANS AVAILABLE ON CRIBBED CORN; NOTES DRAW 4 PER CENT

Farmers in Pickaway-co now can borrow money from the Federal Government and use corn cribbed on the farm for collateral.

Forms for making the loans will be received soon at the office of the agricultural agent, Guy Dowdy, at the Farm Bureau.

Loans are available on corn grading not lower than No. 4, on the basis of 45 cents a bushel on the farm, allowing 2 1-2 cubic feet of crib space to a bushel.

Rate of interest is 4 per cent. The last day of acceptance of application for loans is March 1. Date of maturity is August 1. Pickaway-co is one of the 48 counties in Ohio named on the eligible list released by the Secretary of Agriculture last November.

AIDED BY SOLONS

Until the passage of a farm warehousing act by the Ohio Legislature December 21. Ohioans were unable to take practical advantage of the provisions of the government offer.

The purpose of the act is to provide owners of grain a means of warehousing grain on the farm under proper safeguards as a basis for credit.

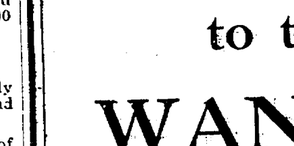

General supervision of the act is lodged in the director of Agriculture, who has licensed a county supervisory board and appoint local inspectors and sealers.

To defray expenses under the act, the owner of the corn must pay to the board at time of sealing an amount not to exceed one cent a bushel of grain inspected and sealed by the sealer. Counties in which federal corn loans will be available are: Adams, Allen, Auglaize, Brown, Butler, Champaign, Clark, Clermont, Defiance, Clinton, Crawford, Darke, Delaware, Fairfield, Fayette, Fulton, Franklin, Green, Hamilton, Hancock, Hardin, Henry, Highland, Hurion, Knox, Licking, Logan, Madison, Marion, Mercer, Miami, Montgomery, Morrow, Paulding, Pickaway, Preble, Putman, Richland, Ross, Sandusky, Seneca, Shelby, Union, Van Wert, Warren, Williams, Wood and Wyandot.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

WE SPEND an awful lot of time criticizing traffic cops and feelin' sorry for ourselves when one of them has just finished serenadin' us. So many folks seem to think that a cop just stands out there on his corner waitin' for some meek lookin' guy to come along so he can tell him what he thinks of his driving.

Now me, I always thought these here Knights Of Old was a couple of hundred years ahead of their time with their armored suits and things. If all the traffic cops was dressed up like that they wouldn't mind so much standin' in the middle of the street while two lines of cars try to see how close they can come without hittin' him.

Downtown in Los Angeles the other day a cop waved a lady driver over to the curb. She had missed takin' off his uniform by about six inches, but after he had cooled off a bit and she had shown her licenses, he says, "You amatoor drivers ought to be chased off the streets, first thing you know, you'll be killing somebody!"

"Why, officer," the lady says, surprised, "only yesterday my sister remarked on how well I had learned to aim the thing!"

"THAT LITTLE GAME" Inter-nat'l Cartoon Co., N.Y.—By B. Link

SENATE MAY PROBE LINDBERGH, HOOVER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The Senate committee investigating ocean and mail contracts will "welcome" the appearance of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh or Herbert Hoover, Jr., to explain in detail their activities with two major air line companies, virtually forced to merge to get a transcontinental mail contract during the administration of Postmaster General Walter F. Brown.

Lindbergh, if he appears, will be expected to answer questions about the gift of $250,000 worth of Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., stock he agreed to accept before he went with the company in 1928 as technical adviser, it also was made clear by Senator Hugo L. Black (D) of Georgia, chairman of the committee.

Under terms of the agreement, made with C. M. Keys, president of T. A. T., Lindbergh also was given an option to purchase 25,000 additional shares of T. A. T. stock over the years 1929, 1930 and 1931, at the par value, $10, if he still was employed by the company.

QUESTION OPTIONS

Committee members made it clear they would like to know if he exercised the options, and at what cash profit, especially in 1929, when the stock was selling on the market at a much higher figure than $10 per share.

Black said he had not decided to request Lindbergh or young Hoover to appear, but "would continue present investigations to find out all about the activities of the companies that employed them."

Hoover, son of the president, was in the employ of the Western Air express, merged with T. A. T. to form Transcontinental and Western Air Transport, Inc., which now has a transcontinental mail contract granted by Postmaster General Brown under terms of the Mcnary Watres act.

Black said the committee has ordered the Western Air transport and T. W. A. T. to supply it with the salaries of all officials before and after the merger, including the salary of young Hoover.

"These will be put into the record when we come to them," the senator stated.

WHAT! Fifty Dollars a Splinter?

THAT'S what one cost Harry Smith by the time he had paid the doctor's bill and lost a week's wages at the plant—while he sat home with an infected hand.

It might have been just a 20-cent splinter if he'd only drawn it at once and used some antiseptic. But the Smith's medicine closet has been out of antiseptics for months—just as it's been out of mouth washes, lotions, salves, and the rest of its accustomed stores.

Most of us, like the Smiths, have not meant to neglect our bathroom cabinets. We've just been strapped for funds. You know. Yet there are some things a medicine cabinet should never be without—iodine, aspirin, soda, salts, disinfectants, and the like. They should always be at hand, ready to banish a headache . . . . to check a gathering cold . . . . heal a cut finger . . . soothe a burned arm . . . minister to a bruised shin.

Every-day supplies, too, . . . like tooth paste . . . brushes . . . soap . . . and powder . . . should always keep two jumps a head of the family.

And right now you can stock up on these things at prices lower than they're ever likely to be again.

Look at it logically. For a time, after 1929, materials lost their basic value. Labor was in the same boat. Now, under the NRA, conditions are improving, wages and employment are expanding, and the common things of life are once more finding substantial value.

But the Government wants everyone and everything to share in this recovery. The chemists who produce your drug supplies . . . the men who make the bottles and boxes they come in . . . the clerks who sell them to you . . . these men, as well as you, have had a higher worth placed upon their labor.

Materials, too, are worth more. The petroleum, magnesium, and other basic products used to make your cough drops, your shaving soaps, and your balms, are commanding higher prices. Since February the wholesale price of all drug items has increased.

Naturally, these new material and labor values are reflecting the prices of all such things as drugs. For the druggist isn't living who can go on selling an article for less than it costs him.

Luckily, you can still get many bathroom supplies at low prices . . . prices that are restless, likely to leap any day. Seize the opportunity! Act at once, while you can save by spending. Now is the time to buy!

Factory workers in the United States were receiving in Aug. 1933 10 million dollars a week more in their pay envelopes than in March

The advertisements in this newspaper bring you news of many good medicine cabinet bargains still to be had. Read them carefully . . . then, at present favorable prices, supply your present and future needs.

The Daily Miracle

TIME is the most valuable of all human possessions. It outranks Love, for love is not permanent. It abides after friends are gone and wealth has vanished. Time is priceless because it is changeless. Of all other things one must say. This, too, shall pass away. Time is the only thing that never ceases to be.

The most precious thing in life is the 24 hours which are allotted to mankind each day. Time is the changeless possession. And the more time one has the wealthier one is. And in this, Youth is the wealthiest of all.

Time is the equal possession of mankind. Without time nothing is possible. With it, all things are. Rich man, poor man, beggar man and thief, all are equally blessed by the daily miracle.

Said Emerson "Give me health, and a day, and I will make the pomp of emperors ridiculous." Said Franklin, "If thou wouldst lay hold on life, save time for time is the stuff that life is made of."

Arnold Bennett, in his prochure, "How to Live on 24 Hours Per Day," says: "You wake up in the morning and your purse is magically filled with 24 hours of the manufactured tissue of the universe of your life. Waste your infinitely precious commodity as much as you will, and the supply will never be withheld from you. You cannot draw on the future. It is impossible to get into debt. You can only waste the passing moment."

What a singularly inept race we are to have invented the phrase, "killing time." After all, that is the real race suicide problem in a nutshell.

Can This Be Done?

CLOTHING for civilized woman is just about the same the world over. A traveler journeying rapidly from Hongkong to Budapest, thence to Paris, New York, San Francisco and Melbourne, would find no more change in feminine style than those which had occurred during the period of his trip. In small towns and large at home and abroad, fashions for women are uniform except in those isolated lands where a national garb has survived.

Some credit, or blame, for this state of affairs must go to the movies. Simultaneous and universal distribution of films gives every girl an equal chance to copy the beautiful distribution of films clothes-horse heroine.

One exception to this rule must be allowed if the observations of an Indianapolis teacher hold true. She is authority for the statement that the feminine population of rural Indiana is holding out against utter uniformity of dress; that farm girls dress better, with more distinction, than city girls, and that they do it with less money.

Can it be that Indiana diary maids have escaped the insidious influences of the films? Or are they more dependent on their own resources, more individualistic? And will city girls agree with this verdict of the Indianapolis teacher?

Anyway the comparison has whetted the public's curiosity. Does the superiority of farmer girls extend to other things? Do they also cook better, keep house better, manage husbands and children better?

"PREMIERE"

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

COPYRIGHT-1932 BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

At the premiere of her latest motion picture, Leni Luneska, beautiful star, is stunned by the appearance of her jailbird husband, whom she married in Vienna when only fourteen. He insists upon recognition as her husband and waits in a private office of the theatre for her to reconsider her refusal. Lucky Cavanaugh, handsome gambler, who fell in love with Leni on sight that evening, tries to make Kruger leave. Kruger empties his gun at Cavanaugh without effect, then rushes into the next office in a rage. He surprises burglars looting a safe and is shot dead. Cavanaugh slips out unnoticed but meets Detective Tom Mulrooney in the hall. Later as Leni and Cavanaugh are about to leave the theatre to avoid questioning, Mulrooney stops them. They deny knowing Kruger, but the theatre manager identifies Kruger as the man Cavanaugh brought to the office to await Leni. Lucky cautions Leni against talking but she tells all to Mulrooney. Cavanaugh also reveals what he knows, except the name of "Slug," one of the robbers whom he recognized. Believing Cavanaugh knows who committed the robbery and killing, if he didn't himself, Mulrooney gives him four days in which to find the guilty man. Escorting Leni home, Cavanaugh finds "Slug" hiding in the shrubbery to warn him that the gangsters fear Cavanaugh will squeal and are out to get him. After leaving "Slug," Cavanaugh enters Leni's home. Before going up to Leni, he sits in a cozy chair thinking of her. Never before had he met a woman like her . . . he wonders if the fascination will last.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Already he was a little blue, feeling in advance the pangs of parting. It would last for a little while and then he would be off again on the endless round of jeering at life and following the devious seduction of his will o' the wisp profession.

But something was giving him an odd feeling of danger. A premonition that he might not be able to sustain himself forever in his world of loyalties and humor, his universe of careless generosities and steel cold nerve.

A spark of discontent was beginning to glow. A woman . . . Leni Luneska . . .

Very slowly he brought himself to the clear realization that he wanted Leni as he had never wanted any woman before. Without egotism, he felt he could have her.

He was thinking thoughts now that welled up from the depth of his being. He could have her and all that went with her—the pleasantly-flavored home like this, her glorious individuality, her rich voice, her golden hair. He could possess her every moment of his life from now on. He could . . .

Then the truth struck him like a fist between the eyes. It was not he who could possess Leni Luneska . . .

She would possess Lucky Cavanaugh!

The revelation came to him like the stripping away of a mask. Marriage to Leni would bind and stifle him in a silken cocoon of love. It would mean the surrender, the captivity of Lucky Cavanaugh.

Everything else would all be over.

In Leni's fragile body was an essence too potent to be subjected to any man. Before long—even yet tonight—he would begin to care so much that he would cease to be free and independent. She had too much charm and magnetism to be taken lightly. The whole proposition was getting clearer to him now.

The silence in which he sat was rent and torn apart suddenly by the imperative ringing of a telephone somewhere in an adjoining room. Cavanaugh let it ring for a while and then since no one else stirred to answer it, he rose and bumped against a few chairs until he found the instrument.

His intention was not to call Leni but pretend he was a servant and take any message.

"Hello," he said in a guarded voice.

He had taken no trouble to disguise his tone. There was an instant of silence in which the apparatus he held seemed curiously alive. Then a woman spoke with a voice like a warm bitter fluid.

"Hello, Lucky—thought I'd catch you there."

His first impulse was to hang up, but he knew the capabilities of Annette. She would keep ringing all night, or worse, get into a car and come out. Annette . . . wild . . . Latin . . . imperious . . .

"What do you want?" he asked, lowering his voice so that it would not be heard upstairs.

"You're not putting anything over on me, Lucky! I saw you in the box with her and I knew what would happen. Why didn't you call me up when you got back from Caliente?"

Against a woman like Annette a man was practically helpless.

Cross-wise across the bed on top of the silken coverlets Leni had flung herself with soft abandonment to small child-like sobs that came more from exhaustion than grief.

Immeasurable relief arrived with the tears.

In pajamas of heavy blue silk with her small feet bare and white she seemed smaller and younger than she really was. After a while she curled over on her side and waited, her eyes and her face still wet with tears. She was quieter now, yet somehow alert in her heart as the tide of physical comfort began to creep over her.

Somewhere in the house Cavanaugh was present. Beyond that fact she had no plans—no decision. It was enough to feel the sensation of his secure protection.

For the first time in her life somebody was watching over her. All of her anguish, as drowsiness stilled her, seemed drifting away. Her nerves were no longer tight as violin strings but were loosened and soothed. It was indescribably blessed. The self-conscious knowledge of his presence was a cloud of contentment surrounding her.

Without any sense of being disturbed, Leni heard the distant ringing of the telephone downstairs.

The bell would be unheard by the servants sleeping in another part of the house. It made no difference. After a time she was conscious—without actually catching his voice—that Cavanaugh was talking with someone on the phone.

Leni sat up in bed. For a while she sat with her knees drawn up, listening.

The house was so still that she could hear the masculine quality of his voice although it was subdued to mere murmuring. As she listened she became wider awake. Her feet swung to the floor and her toes found their way into soft, flat-soled slippers.

Whatever the conversation downstairs was about she knew with a small sharp instinct that it concerned herself. Step by step Leni moved into the hall and softly down the stairs. She drew nearer to Cavanaugh in the semi-darkness.

Her heart moved a little faster. There was nothing complicated in her motive. It was a simple primitive desire to be near him. The fact that he was talking to somebody was really secondary. On the lower floor she turned an angle of the hall and came up to the door of a small room where he stood dimly outlined, the reddish tip of a cigarette in his hand punctuating the night. He was leaning against a shelf of books, holding a French telephone. His back was toward Leni, a silhouette with broad shoulders and straight legs.

For a moment she stood regarding him, mysteriously gratified by the artistic rightness of his proportions. He was listening to someone who talked for a long time. Then he spoke with the tone of argument.

"All right—tomorrow then. Yes, I promise."

Leni began to have the uncomfortable feeling of eavesdropping. She was on the verge of letting him know she was there when he spoke again.

"Will you be a good girl, Annette, please?" he pleaded with muffled exasperation. "Calm down and go to bed. You're just exciting yourself over nothing. I can't keep arguing with you all night. I care exactly as much for you as I always did—but I'm not at all interested in your hysterics. If you haven't any pride you certainly ought to have a sense of humor——"

Once more he was interrupted. Time enough for Leni to glide into the room with a soft swishing of her silken pajamas. Her hand went unerringly to the switch on a table lamp in the room and the secrecy of the room vanished in a flood of amber light. Cavanaugh's shoulders, sleek in their dinner jacket, swung around. Leni saw a new face, darkened with moody impatience.

"Wait a minute," he said into the telephone and put it down.

"I thought I'd give you a little light," Leni said, looking straight at him. "We have plenty of electricity in this house.

"Don't be foolish!" he said to her sharply. It was the first time he had ever addressed her in that tone.

"I won't!" she answered, her eyes darkening.

An unpleasant warmth was beginning to prickle her skin. Her face, she felt, was beginning to get white with a nameless passion. A tension like rubber bands was drawing her brows together.

"Don't mind me," she said coldly. "I'm going back upstairs. You needn't keep the lady waiting."

Without taking his eyes from her face, Cavanaugh reached behind him and picked up the phone.

"Goodbye!" he said into it briefly and put up the thing with a decisive click.

"I'm sorry this happened," he stated almost curtly. "A fool woman saw me with you tonight and called me up here. I don't know how much you heard of what I said to her——"

"Very little. It doesn't matter, I assure you."

Cavanaugh took a step forward and put both his hands on Leni's shoulders. "I'm sorry—it does matter. I've annoyed you——"

"Take your hands off me!" exclaimed Leni.

Tears began to flood her eyes. Cavanaugh's hands, warm and compelling, continued to hold her in a steadying grasp.

"If there is anything in the world that is disgusting it's a jealous woman!" said Cavanaugh grimly. "I just hung up the telephone on one of that kind. You're sore at me—because she called me up here. I'm telling you—right now—that we've both too much at stake to clutter it up with any darn foolishness."

She gulped in her throat like a little girl. "Will you please . . . let me go . . ."

"I will not!"

With one hand he turned out the lamp then, as though she had no weight at all, picked her up in his arms like a child and started toward the stairs.

First Eyeglasses

Eyeglasses were invented some time during the Thirteenth century. The circumstances and, for that matter, the name of the inventor are unknown. The credit is attributed by some to Alessandro di Spina, a monk of Florence, and by others to Roger Bacon, the English monk and philosopher.

"Do Your Share"

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Having stolen pictures from practically every star in Hollywood, W. C. Fields and Alison Skipworth are now trying to steal a picture from each other.

These two lovable rascals are together at last, in a picture called "Tillie and Gus." It will be shown on Friday and Saturday at the Clifton Theatre.

Fields and Skipworth play the roles of card sharks who, after emptying wallets and dodging sheriffs all the way from Shanghai to Nome, arrive back home to find their niece and her husband practically penniless due to the skin-flint methods of a shyster lawyer.

They decide to give the old crook a bit of his own medicine, help themselves to a fortune and bring happiness to the young couple. How they do it by means of a diving suit and an old ferry-boat furnishes the film with a score of hilarious moments.

Featured with the comedy team are Baby LeRoy, Jacqueline Wells, and Clifford Jones. The picture was adapted from an original story written by Rupert Hughes.

Rundown, Nervous

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery builds up the stomach and the blood so that the entire system feels the beneficial effect. Your appetite increases and you feel more peppy than you have felt in years. This is the experience of Mrs. Augusta Johns of 322 So. Montgomery St., Dayton, Ohio: "I had become so nervous I couldn't sleep, my appetite failed, I lost weight, had headaches and pains in back and side. After taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery I was restored to normal health. I could eat and enjoy foods that formerly distressed me. I felt strong and well again."
New size, tablets 50 cts., liquid $1.00. Large size, tabs. or liquid, $1.35. "We Do Our Part."

Hard to Distinguish Hawks

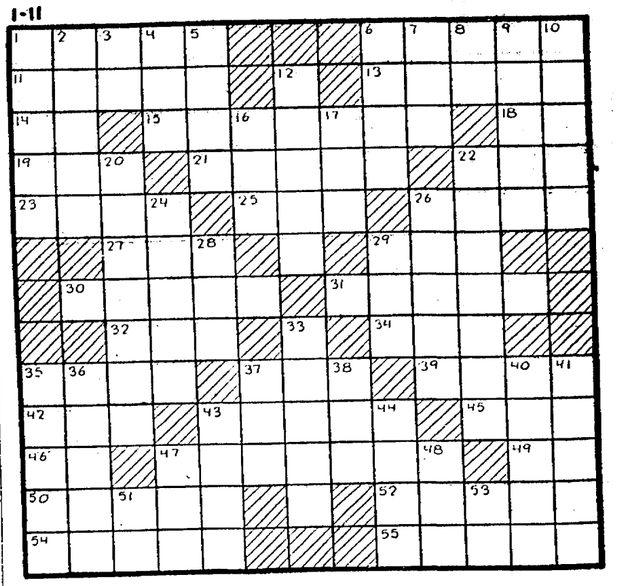

It is difficult for the novice to distinguish between the various hawks as they sail overhead. Some are slow flyers and sail along leisurely looking for rodents, frogs and other ground inhabiting creatures, while others, like the sharp-shinned sparrow and Cooper's hawks, show remarkable speed on the wing and waste little time when they are after food.

A Century of Progress In World of Medicine

Dr. Copeland Tells Something of the Great Advances Made in Medical Science

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

NO DOUBT many of you visited the Chicago fair. It is probable that many have had the opportunity of visiting other great fairs. But I venture to say the Chicago Century of Progress was the first exposition to show the tremendous advances that have been made in medicine and surgery during one century. Visitors were amazed at the graphic displays exhibiting man's conquest of disease.

Few realize how fortunate they are to live in this wonderful age of scientific research. Our forefathers fought to overcome numerous hardships. Many of their hazards were far beyond control. They struggled to combat germs and disease with inadequate facilities. It is remarkable, when one considers how limited their knowledge was, that disease did not take an even greater toll of lives.

It is hard to realize that one hundred years ago surgery was in its infancy, and that few operations were successfully performed. A hundred years ago an operation for hernia was unheard of, and an operation for removal of an abdominal tumor was unknown. Few diseases were understood and the victims of serious ailments were doomed to death.

The discovery and development of anesthesia made it possible for all operations to be performed painlessly and at a minimum risk. Wound infections were common then but now rarely occur. Germs unheard of a century ago are now thoroughly understood and successfully combatted.

I believe that the greatest advancement in this Century of Progress is in the field of preventive medicine. In this, certainly, we enjoy a "new deal," a new medicine. The doctor of yesterday attempted to cure disease; the doctor of today urges the prevention of disease. I am sure that when another century shall have passed gigantic strides will have been made and startling methods discovered for the prevention rather than the cure of disease.

Whether you visited the fair, or stayed home, my advice to all is to take advantage of what modern science offers. If you have not recently consulted with your doctor, do so now. Do not wait for pain or ache to send you hastily to his office. Have an inventory taken of your health right now. To do so will be to guard yourself against disease in serious and incurable form.

Bear in mind that health can be maintained only by careful regulation of the diet and strict attention to the rules of hygiene. An abundance of fresh air and sunlight, sufficient hours of sleep and relaxation will help, but it is also important to correct all physical deformities and constitutional defects.

ened carefully, even a bit sympathetically.

The boys told their story, handed in a petition, went home. Louey sighed, picked up the petition, read it through. It was a ramid treatise against war. Suddenly Louey sat up, rang for his secretary.

"Have those youngsters gone?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Too bad," he mused. "They forgot to sign their petition. It was nicely worded too."

Merry-Go-Round

The resignation of Wall Street's dapper Earle Bailie, as financial adviser to the Treasury, was a lone handed victory for Senator Jim Couzens . . . The resolute Michigander sent word to Secretary Morgenthau that if Bailie was not ousted before January 15, he would take the Senate floor against him and assail his bond-floating record . . . Bailie resigned January 6, just 9 days before the deadline . . . Little Finland's payment of the full sum due the U. S. on its war debt is proving good business as well as highly favorable publicity . . . Its bonds have been steadily going up in price, while those of the defaulting and "token" paying powers have sagged . . . A hot sartorial war is under way among Republican and Democratic dandies of the House. . . The former wear white carnations in their lapels, the latter red . . . The handsomest attired man in the Senate on opening day was not a senator at all . . . He was Colonel (Kentucky brand) Ed Halsey, secretary of the chamber, attired in a faultlessly fitting Prince Albert, standup collar and pin-point trousers . . . Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, one-time Republican Representative from Illinois and senatorial aspirant from that State, has been in the Capital seeking support for her husband's ambition to be Republican Governor of New Mexico . . . Simms, a lame duck Congressman, was understood to be planning to run against the Progressive Senator Bronson Cutting . . . But he and his politically astute wife, now think his chances to win are better in the gubernatorial situation. . . . The struggle over the Tugwell pure food and drug bill is getting fiercer. . . . Business interests opposing the measure are hauling up their political "Big Berthas" . . . The Drug Institute, one of the most determined opponents, has employed J. Bruce Kremer, former Democratic National Committeeman from Montana, as its "chief counsel" in the battle . . . In the first six months of its operation, the Federal Home Owners Loan Corporation made loans totalling $103,257,858 on 36,310 urban homes . . . The Corporation is keeping secret the number of applicants made for such relief, but a significant of their extent can be had from the fact that it has tentatively approved 234,976 requests totalling $662,547,599.

ASHVILLE SCHOOL NEWS

Two grades, seventh and ninth, made 100 per cent in attendance for the month of December. Three, the second, fourth and eighth, were 100 in punctuality.

Leah Jane Vause, Jane Hudson, Maxine Canter, Jean Martin and Francile Runkle represented Ashville in the All State Chorus which entertained the O. S. T. A. in Columbus, Thursday evening, Dec. 28. John Peters and Hewitt Cromley should have taken part but illness prevented.

The Ashville Board of Education reorganized Monday evening of last week by re-electing all old officers—Dr. C. J. Rockey, Pres.; J. R. Hedges, Vice Pres.; W. E. Essick, clerk. One new member, Stanley Beckett, was sworn in. G. C. Cline was re-appointed to the joint high school board.

The Ashville-Harrison joint board also re-organized the same evening by re-electing the former officers: Dr. Rockey, Pres. and C. E. Wright, Vice President. This board also has one new member, Jesse Baum of Duvall.

The Home Economics class has started their sewing which continues the rest of the year. Some of the students are doing tie and dye work.

The semester tests will be given Friday for those not having a G average or above.

Warren Pence returned to the sixth grade last week after attending school at Walnut and Jackson-twps.

In studying the Civil War this month the sixth grade has been divided into Unios and Confederate soldiers. Those receiving a grade of 85 or above joined the Union troops. As a result only 5 out of 29 pupils were placed on the Confederate side. They can become Union soldiers only by raising their grade.

Ashville high school basketball team traveled to Jackson last Friday night and found some very surprising opposition. Ashville, for the first three quarters, could not click. At the end of the first quarter the score was 6-2, at the half 14-7, third period 21-11 and not until the last five minutes of the fourth period did the Ashville boys begin to click. When the final gun sounded Ashville, again was on the long end of a 45-19 score. Next Friday Ashville entertains Williamsport at Ashville. The girls' score was Ashville, 30; Jackson, 12.

READY FOR WYNEKOOP TRIAL

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty, who acts as prosecutor as Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop goes on trial Thursday for the murder of her daughter-in-law, is shown checking over the exhibits in the famous case. The operating table upon which the body of Rheta Gardner Wynekoop, the victim, was found, is the most dramatic of the "silent witnesses." On the table in the bundles are Rheta's clothes and other articles that have figured in the sensational mystery. On the wall is a plan of the rear of the gloomy home in Chicago where the crime was committed.

PERRY-TWP SCHOOL NEWS

Subjects changing at the beginning of the second semester are Community Civics replaced by Occupations, Sociology instead of Economics, and sewing instead of cooking in Home Economics.

Plans are being made for the local Farmers' Institute which will be held Jan. 22-23. Our school will furnish the music on Monday and New Holland schools will entertain Tuesday.

The sixth grade had perfect attendance last week.

The Perry basketball teams journeyed to Williamsport last Thursday evening where they met the Monroe teams. The two contests kept the fans on their feet from the initial period until the crack of the gun.

The girls' game was featured by the excellent guarding on the part of both teams. At the intermission the score stood 6 to 4. The final half saw the Monroe team increase their lead to 16 to 9. Inasmuch as our entire squad is composed of all freshmen but one we are proud of this score against an undefeated team.

The boys' game was featured by the individual battle between R. Walters and George Speakman with neither player having the advantage. W. Hoskins was the offensive star for Perry. The final score was Perry 21 and Monroe 15.

This Friday we meet New Holland in our gym. We feel that these two contests will climax our basketball season and that they will be two hotly contested games. "Dutch" Leonard, the capable Spaulding referee, who refereed our first game this season, will handle the game. We expect an over crowded house.

Spelling Honor Roll—Third, Pauline Morris, Lucile Bell Cottrell, Hazel Hatfield and Mary Kerns.

Fourth: Jeanette Baker, Marelyn Campbell, Robert Morris, Helen Wallace, Junior Hall and Jane Hope Skinner.

Sixth: Helen Bowdle, Helen Mills, Julia Kerns, Ray Bentley, Mary Parker, Wilbur Pugh, Grace Self, Pauline Mills, and Nellie Forsythe.

Seventh and Eighth: Ruth Bentley, Betty Hollis, and Faye Hollis.

In Memory of Sousa

Commemorating the world-famous career of the composer and band leader, John Philip Sousa, a marble tombstone has been erected above his grave in Congressional cemetery at Washington. Carved on the slab beneath which lies his body are the opening strains of his most noted composition, the stirring march "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

BOWMAN SEEN

31, which leads to Nelsonville.

Dicken said he was positive of his identification of Bowman as the driver of the maroon-colored automobile. He said that Bowman was alone and that a radio in the car was turned on.

The radio has been utilized by the state highway patrol and county, and city officers in the hunt—probably the most intensive ever staged in the state.

Upon receipt of the report of the trail of the maroon-colored automobile, two automobiles, manned by five state highway patrolmen and two deputy sheriffs, set out in chase. The highway patrolmen had just turned in hardly an hour before following an all-night patrol of roads throughout this section for the bandit.

Concentration of the searching posses in this section was started after reports were received late yesterday that Bowman had been identified by Miles Graham, owner of a gasoline filling station, as the man who drove into the filling station, located near Logan.

Graham declared that Bowman at that time was accompanied by two other men, leading officers to suspect that the bandit might be attempting to organize a "gang."

NAVY ARMADA

ing an arrow like course, the six planes, carrying 30 men, which left San Francisco at 2:25 p. m. (P. S. T.) under command of Lieut. Commander Knefler McGinnis at 2 a. m. (P. S. T.) reported by radio they were 1041 nautical miles on their line of flight, well past the half way mark.

The distance from the Golden Gate to Pearl Harbor is 2150 nautical miles or 2470 land miles. The figures used by the navy are nautical miles.

The planes were averaging better than 90 nautical miles an hour.

With a favoring tail wind and almost ideal weather conditions predicted for the last half of their flight, the six planes were expected to reach their destination at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, well within 24 hours after their takeoff from Paradise Cove near here yesterday.

MAY CIRCLE WORLD

While naval officials declined to comment, it was generally believed the flight was but the first leg of a globe circling tour with Midway, another United States outpost island as the next stop. This may be attempted next May or June.

Throughout the night a radio record of the notable flight trickled into twelfth district naval headquarters in terse official messages from Commander McGinnis and in inter-plane communications intercepted by naval operators.

Thrills were not lacking despite the almost precise program progress of the flight.

One plane, the 10-P5, commanded by Lieut. Commander St. John Perry, was separated from the squadron by fog for 32 minutes.

"Separated from squadron by fog," read a message from his plane intercepted at 8:45 p. m.

Concern over his plight was quickly dissipated, however, in a message at 9:17 p. m. from Commander McGinnis stating that the plane had rejoined the formation.

At 11:41 p. m. the 10-P5 again was reported out of formation.

An intercepted message, apparently to Flight Commander McGinnis, from the 10-P5 read:

"Not in sight but am in vicinity and will attempt to rejoin at once."

Assurance that darkness had not caused the squadron to deviate from its course came at 2:22 a. m. (P. S. T.) when Commander McGinnis radioed that the searchlight of the U. S. S. Breese had been picked up.

The Breese is the third of a chain of six naval vessels stationed at approximately 300 miles intervals across the Pacific to supply radio and visual guidance to the flyers and to add another element of safety to the air venture in case of mishap.

SOVIET, JAPAN

at both Vladisvostok port and Harbarovsk, junction of the Amur and Sungari rivers, the Japanese map indicates.

The Soviet army in main is shown as stationed behind heavy fortresses in eight cities.

The Yomiuri newspaper in a headline today says:

"A fence of red guns encircles Manchukuo. Our army propagandizing can inform the Japanese that Manchuria is in danger of a war attack by the Soviets."

Meanwhile, information here reveals that the office of the Japanese military attache at Peiping, China, is included in the departments engaged in the campaign of warning.

CHINESE WARNED

Official statements by the Japanese army representative there, given out in Chinese, warns the Chinese that they must remain at least neutral in case of a Japanese conflict with a third power, and should preferably put their resources at the disposal of Japan.

The newspaper Hochi today reports that a Soviet mission from Moscow is investigating Mongolian military affairs.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota is preparing to negotiate with the Soviets as soon as the sale of the Chinese Eastern Railway to Manchukuo is pushed through, it was learned today. Hiota, former ambassador at Moscow, will ask the Soviets to abandon military measures being taken along the Manchurian and Kerean borders, and to withdraw their troops.

WYNEKOOP

man with two bullets from Wynekoop's gun in his body.

INTRUDER HIT

"Three bullets were fired from the gun that killed Rheta," said Wynekoop, sitting with his sister in the office of his label-manufacturing firm on Chicago's west side. "One was found in the body. The other two were not in the house. Mother believes, and so do I, that they hit the intruder.

"The way I see it, Rheta shot him when he surprised her, and he shot her, trying to get the gun away. Then, as she lay groaning, he seized the chloroform bottle and put her out of her misery, both because she was horrible to watch and because she could identify him if she recovered.

"The gun was in the basement, easily available. So was the chloroform. It was all done before mother came back from her calls."

The confession Dr. Wynekoop made to police, both Walker and Dr. Catherine call worthless, because they say it was made after three nights of sleeplessness, during which time the aged doctor had had only two cups of coffee and a sandwich to eat.

WASHINGTON-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

Charles Helvering, caretaker of the Washington-twp school building, is ill at this writing and not able to attend his duties. Mrs. Helvering is working double time to keep us comfortable.

The work on the converting of the garage into a gymnasium is almost completed. At last we are going to have a place to play volley ball, basketball and many other games. This floor will be used also by Miss Rader for the grade Physical Education program. Doubtless our community will find many uses to which they can put this building and a great deal of enjoyment will be gotten out of it.

Our boys did not fare so well at the hands of the Muhlenberg boys in their basketball game on the latter's floor on last Friday night. The score was 37 to 7 and we were thankful for the 7. However after a few weeks consistent practice in our new gym, we expect to do much better, and may win a game yet before the season is over.

Miss Rader taught Mr. Bennett's classes Monday while he assisted in finishing the floor of the gymnasium.

At chapel Tuesday afternoon, David Adams was elected to be the general manager of the school paper. Erma Valentine was elected to be his assistant. Olive Hartley was elected editor and Richard Elliott assistant. It is the plan to issue one edition each month. The paper will be published on the lettergraph.

Laughing Around the World

And Worth the Money, Too!

By IRVIN S. COBB

A NOTED lawyer down in Texas, who labored under the defects of having a high temper and of being deaf, was trying a case in a courtroom presided over by a younger man, for whom the older practitioner had a small opinion.

Presently in an argument over a motion there was a clash between the lawyer and the judge. The judge ordered the lawyer to sit down, and the lawyer being deaf, didn't hear him and went on talking, the judge fined him $10 for contempt of court.

The lawyer leaned toward the clerk and cupped his hand behind his ear.

"What did he say?" he inquired.

"He fined you $10," explained the clerk.

For what?"

"For contempt of this court," said the clerk.

The lawyer shot a poisonous look toward the bench and reached a hand into his pocket.

"I'll pay it now," he said. "It's a just debt!"
